Husband and Two Sons.

While the wreck has brought the deep-st sorrow to scores of Washington est sorrow to scores of Washington homes, a triple portion visited that of Dr. E. G. Belt, who lost his life, with his two sons. Edward and St. Clair. Mrs. Belt was at home nursing the youngest son—Norvell—three years old, who has a broken leg. Hearing of the wreek, and knowing her husband and sons were on the train, it was with increasing horror she waited in vain their coming. She summoned Dr. Morton Griffith and started him in search for the missing ones. Dr. Griffith first visited the hospitals and then turned to the morgue. Here he found the father, and one of the boys. The little fellow's body was badly mangled, and nothing but the trunk of Dr. Belt remained. Later the other lad—St. Clair was located in a hospital, where he died.

Most Terrible Thing in Washington's History Since Collapse of Ford's Theatre.

(From Our Regular Correspondent,1 WASHINGTON, D. C., December $1.—
The appailing disaster on the Baltimore and Ohio in the suburbs of Washington last night, in which more than two-score lives were lost, has stirred the capital as nothing has done in years. It was the most tragic affair of that character that Washington has known the collabse. most tragic affair of that character that Washington has known, the collapse of the old Ford Theatre several years ago being the only accident to be compared to it, although the number of lives lost in the latter catastrophe was insignificant in comparison. The greater number of the victims of last night's wreck at Terra Cotta were Washington people.

All day the bulletin boards, despite the All day the bulletin boards, despite the constant downpour, have been surrounded by prople looking for fresh names of victims, fearing to see the name of some loved one who is missing. Such an unusually large number of victims remain unidentified that the suspense is more prolonged than is usual in the case of railway wreeks. In several cases identification will never be possible, so terribly mangled are the bodies.

Crowds Go Out in Rain,

Crowds Go Out in Rain.

Despite the rain, a large number of people went out on the trolley cars to the scene of the wreck to-day. A wreck-ling crew has been at work all day removing the debris of smashed cars.

Every effort is made to preserve every article of apparel found in the ruins, in the hope that it may prove helpful in identifying victims not yet recogalized.

Not in many a day have there been so many houses of mourning in Washington. Some of the victims were widely known. Dr. E. Oliver Belt was one of the leading oculists of the city. He and his seven-year-old son were killed. Another little son died at the hospital to day.

Mrs. Belt, when she heard of the accident, 'phoned to Terra Cotta, and was told that a gentleman and a little boy were walking about the station. She was almost satisfied that the two were her husband and son. A kinsman telephoned a few minutes later, and the operator told him that the doctor had been injured. It was an hour after this before the news came, that Dr. Belt was among the killed, and that their little son was also in eternity. Mrs. Belt is prostrated.

on the Frederick accommodation, the train which was wrecked.

Last night, for some reason which is not clear to either of them, they returned on the troiley-something they had not done in a long while. They are probably alive to-day as the result of an action taken without reason.

A young lady of Washington, who was at Takoma, tried to make the Frederick accommodation back to Washington, but missed it by about two minutes. While she was deploring her failure to catch the train, it was smashed into atoms, and dozens of its passengers were hurled into the next world.

Innumerable stories such as these are being told in this city to-day. The feeling against the railroad people is strong. The general opinion is that the wreck was inexcusable. The railway company has promised a speedy and thorough investigation.

CAPTAIN PHILIP M. SNIDER.

With impressive Masonic services, conducted by St. John's Lodge, No. 25, A. F. and A. M., the funeral of Captain Philip M. Shider, who committed suicide while lying lacross his wife's grave in Hollywood Cemetery Sunday, took place from his late home, No. 327 South Pine Street, yesterday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Sorrowing friends were gathered at the home and at the grave to pay their late fribute of respect to the memory of a gentleman of the old school. The floral designs were beautiful, and came from lodges and from friends in different parts of the city. His daughter and son, both of whom are well-nigh prostrated, have the deepest sympathy of hundreds who knew and loved Captain Snider.

In round numbers he places the receipts for the calendar year 1906 at $625,000,000 and the expenditures at $595,000,000, or an excess of receipts over expenditures of $59,000,000. In his judgment it permits adequate ex-pansion, but that its weakness is its pansion, but that its weakness is its failure to produce contraction. The voltage of money, he contends, does not respond to the volume of our business. The annual increase, he adds, may be sufficient, but there is no annual contraction during the dull summer months. 'Only the unthinking and ill-advised,' he says, 'charge the admitted stringency solely or largely to stock and bond speculation.'

She had been in poor health but a short while, and her case was not considered serious. Consulting the best medical advice available, she determined to submit to an operation, which it was supposed would be attended with little risk of life. However, the wisest and best of human judgment sometimes fails. The third day after the operation was performed she sweetly fell on sleep. In young womanhood she was noted for her personal beauty, which she retained in a marked degree to the last. Surpassing this, however, was the beauty and charm of her character, her life. To know her was to admire and love her. A loving wife, a devoted mother, a true and faithful friend. a devout Christian, always cheerful and happy, her presence brightened her home, where genuine hospitality was truly avished, and loving friendship richly bestowed.

Her death, so sudden and unexpected, was a great shock—yea, an intense grief—to her large circle of friends and relatives, and especially so to those of her own family. May the grief-stricken husband and children find consolation in the assurance thigt their dear, one is simply promoted to a purer and better sphere; finere she waits to welcome them when life is abors are over. Tender and loving hands laid to rest all that was mortal of the dear departed one in the church cometery near her home. Here she will rest in peace till the morn of the resurrection, when her glorified body shall come forth, robed for an aternal and celeistal existence.

McKENNEY, VA. December Sl.—Mrs.
Jennie Baskerville, wife of George D.
Baskerville, died at her home near here this morning, in the seventy-second year of her age. Her health had been very bad for several years. Possessed of a remarkably sweet disposition, she will be mourned by a large circle of friends, as she was one of the most popular women in the county.
